SUMMARY:

Our inaugural tour to Vietnam was underway, with everyone arriving a day or so early, allowing for some cultural exploration in the city. The nearby river introduced a few of us to some common bird species, and once the tour began, we headed for Cat Tien National Park and stayed in lovely, clean, air-conditioned cabins within the park.

Birds and noisy Gibbons were right outside our rooms, and all the birding was conveniently close by. We saw some amazing species, including Germain's Peacock-pheasant, Siamese Fireback, Golden-crested Mynas, Blue-bearded Bee-eater, Banded Kingfisher, Black-and-red Broadbill, Slaty-legged Rail, Collared Falconet, and the enormous Great Slaty Woodpecker.

We then moved on to Dilinh and struggled a bit with the foggy weather. From our wonderful lodge, we spotted a Chestnut-winged Cuckoo, and then, on the nearby forested roads, we tracked down a Streaked Wren-babbler, glimpsed a brief Long-tailed Broadbill, spotted an Indochinese Barbet, and observed some other elusive forest birds.

Our final destination was Dulat, where we visited a variety of different habitats in search of more special birds. In the mountain pine forests and edges, we found Collared Laughingthrushes, Vietnamese Cutias, Grey-crowned Crocias, Hume's Treecreeper, Grey-bellied Tesia, Yellow-billed Nuthatch, Rufous-backed Sibias, and Rufous-browed Flycatcher, plus much more. A bit of night birding rewarded us with sightings of an Oriental Scops Owl and Grey Nightjars. Our guide, Minh, was absolutely superb, providing us with top-notch birding experiences and wonderful insights into Vietnamese culture and food.

Day 1 Arrival Day - Ho Chi Minh City - 27th March

Everyone had arrived at least a day early, and introduced themselves to the hustle and bustle of the busy city of Ho Chi Minh, formerly called Saigon and still called this by many locals including our guide, Minh. A good night's rest and we were all ready for our adventure starting tomorrow.

Day 2 Ho Chi Minh - Cat Tien - 28th March

Today, we indulged in a leisurely breakfast before our departure from the city, aiming to avoid the early morning traffic rush. Once our coach arrived, we embarked on our journey through the vibrant hustle and bustle of Ho Chi Minh, navigating amidst the swarm of seven million motorcycles, heading towards Cat Tien National Park a three-hour drive away. The journey offered little in terms of bird sightings, yet provided ample glimpses into the Vietnamese way of life. Around noon, we reached the ferry crossing to the park, loading our luggage before sailing across the river to the Cat Tien Forest, where our cabins near the park headquarters awaited. The heat was quite intense, so we were relieved to retreat to our rooms and switch on the air-conditioning. Following a delightful lunch, during which we spotted some exquisite Golden Gem dragonflies, we took a brief rest until the temperature began to drop slightly around 3 pm.

Exploring the vicinity of our cabins, we encountered a nesting pair of Ashy Drongos, possibly a split into Greyish Drongo, and a White-rumped Shama feasting on termites. Our journey continued on foot along the road, where we sighted a few Bronzed Drongos and a couple of Streak-eared Bulbuls nestled in the garden shrubbery. Other brief sightings included an Oriental Magpie Robin and a Grey-eyed Bulbul disappearing behind a tree. However, our luck changed as we stumbled upon a stunning Black-crested Bulbul, an incredible looking Greater Racket-tailed Drongo, and a flock of Golden Crested Mynas, which we observed through our scopes in a fruiting tree. Moving just a few meters ahead, we encountered a Lesser Yellownape and shortly after, a Black-naped Oriole and a Common Flameback. We then followed a small track, where we were rewarded with the sight of a confiding Great Iora and a pair of Chinese Pond Herons. Although a Common Tailorbird made a fleeting appearance, the Black-naped Monarch put on a splendid show. Continuing our walk along the road, we were thrilled to spot Oriental Pied Hornbills, a Black Bulbul, and hear the call of a White-bellied Woodpecker. Amidst the forest clearing, we were fortunate to witness the majestic flight of one such woodpecker and the fleeting presence of a Blue-naped Pitta darting across the road. Only a few of us managed to catch a glimpse of it. Next, we spotted a pair of Dollarbirds perched on a dead tree and a Striped-throated Bulbul tending to its fledgling. Suddenly, the sky turned grey, and the distant rumble of thunder signalled an approaching storm. Hastily, we made our way back, but the rain caught up with us, drenching us thoroughly before we reached the safety of our cabins.

Day 3 Cat Tien National Park - 29th March

This morning, we started with an early breakfast before gathering by the truck that would transport us along one of the roads to a different area of the forest. Before boarding, we were greeted by the distant calls of Buff-cheeked Gibbons, also known as Southern Yellow-cheeked Crested Gibbon, leading us to spot a group perched atop some bare trees. As we observed them, Minh pointed out a Blue-bearded Bee-eater followed shortly by a White-throated Kingfisher, and even a Green Pigeon tending to its nest. An Indochinese Cuckoo-shrike made a brief appearance overhead, while Asian Palm Swifts darted around in the sky. Once aboard our open truck, we journeyed a few kilometres into the park, spotting Emerald Doves along the roadside and a pair of Junglefowl disappearing into the foliage. Upon reaching our drop-off point, we proceeded to walk slowly along the road. Ashy-headed Green Pigeons made an impressive display, while a family of Black-shanked Duc's quietly observed us from the treetops. We scoped a Golden-fronted Leafbird perched atop one tree and caught glimpses of Vernal Hanging Parrots flying overhead. A few Red-breasted Parakeets also flew overhead before our attempts to locate a Green-eared Barbet, were successful. Continuing on, we encountered a Dark-necked Tailorbird and a stunning Crimson Sunbird. Nearby, a male Black-hooded Oriole and several Stripe-cheeked Bulbuls also caught our attention. Despite hearing them, we unfortunately couldn't spot a Laced Woodpecker,

Heart-spotted Woodpecker, or Pale-headed Woodpecker. However, we were rewarded by a pair of huge Great Slaty Woodpeckers that flew across the road. As we ventured further along a side trail into the forest, we got varying views of a secretive Bar-bellied Pitta. Other birds spotted along this track included a Bay Woodpecker, Great lora, Pin-striped Tit-babbler, and a Ruby-throated Sunbird. With the heat intensifying, we decided to return to the shuttle bus and head back to the lodge for lunch. After a break during the hottest part of the day, we returned to the forest. Despite hearing the calls of an Orange-bellied Trogon, it remained elusive. However, we did spot our first Black-and-red Broadbill a little further along. A Green-billed Malkoha also caught our eye, and later, we observed a very close Pin-striped Tit Babbler. Our luck continued as we enjoyed excellent views of a Chinese White-faced Drongo, while the remainder of the afternoon yielded sightings of a Banded Kingfisher and varying views of another Bar-bellied Pitta as it moved in and out of the bamboo. Later, as it became dusk, we attempted to spot a Blyth's Frogmouth but only managed to hear one or two calls.

Day 4 Cat Tien National Park - 30th March

This morning, after breakfast, we set off again to explore a different area of the forest. Along the way, a Laced Woodpecker flew over and perched in a nearby tree, giving us a great view. Upon reaching our drop-off point, we were greeted with a delightful array of birds, without even needing to move. Green-eared Barbets were unusually visible, alongside Blue-eared Barbets, several Asian Fairy Bluebirds flitted about in the treetops, and we successfully tracked down a calling Banded Broadbill, enjoying scope views of this elusive bird. Nearby, we spotted a Banded Kingfisher and later, a Green-billed Malkoha made a conspicuous appearance. In the canopy, a pair of Golden Crested Mynas caught our attention, while a Heart-spotted Woodpecker flew overhead. We scoped a Thick-billed Green Pigeon and also observed a Streaked Spiderhunter. Continuing along the track, we encountered a Bar-winged Shrike Flycatcher and a striking male Black-hooded Oriole. Those at the front of the group were treated to the sight of a male Siamese Fireback darting across the path before disappearing into dense cover. Ashy Woodswallows also flew overhead, and we were thrilled to spot an Orange-breasted Trogon through our scopes. Following some noise from the treetops, we were treated to the sight of a pair of copulating Collared Falconets. Moving on, we stumbled upon an Abbott's Babbler feeding beneath a bush, and a Red-breasted Parakeet perched in a tall dead tree. The call of a Great Slaty Woodpecker led us on a merry chase as it flitted from tree to tree, mostly staying out of view, but eventually seen by all. Several Pin-striped Tit-Babblers foraged nearby, and while observing these, we spotted a Velvet-fronted Nuthatch. A distant call then caught our attention, and soon we were watching a Crested Serpent Eagle circling high above. Continuing our exploration, we observed a couple of Dark-necked Tailorbirds and an Asian Brown Flycatcher before turning back to witness a Green-legged Partridge walking through a bamboo patch. Along the way, we glimpsed a pair of Silver Langurs and spotted a Crested Goshawk circling above. Our last bird sighting of the morning was a Dusky Broadbill perched high in a tree, which we managed to scope before returning to the lodge for lunch and some rest. In the afternoon, our adventure resembled a safari as we leisurely drove along one of the other tracks in our open-top truck. In the first open area, we spotted a female Green Peafowl, followed by a Brown Shrike and some Red Collared Doves perched in the treetops, plus a pair of Sooty-headed Bulbuls in one of the trees. A large male Sambar Deer caught our attention, and as we continued, Tony spotted a Chinese Francolin perched on a grassy mound. We then saw a Paddyfield Pipit, and in a tree filled with seed pods, we found a pair of Vinous-breasted Starlings. Further along, we observed a male Junglefowl and spotted another Sambar near a pond, along with a Chinese Pond Heron. A Little Cormorant flew off, and we enjoyed good views of a lone perched Blossom-headed Parakeet, with two Green Imperial Pigeons flying overhead. At the end of our drive, we reached a small watchtower where some of the group watched a beautiful male Green Peafowl. On our way back, near dusk, we spotted a couple of Pig-tailed Macaques, and in the same area, we heard and caught distant views of a flying Great-eared Nightjar.

Day 5 Cat Tien National Park - 31st March

This morning, we visited one of the bird hides and had an enlightening discussion about the ethics surrounding birdwatching and hides in Vietnam. Upon entering the hide, we were greeted by the sight of a female Siamese Fireback, later joined by its stunning male counterpart. Next, we spotted a Slaty-legged Crake and a pair of Blue-rumped Pittas.

Among the smaller birds were Black-headed Bulbuls, Puff-throated Babblers, and Buff-fronted Babblers. Indochinese

Blue Flycatchers, both male and female, made appearances, as did female Siberian Robins. The highlight was witnessing a male Germain's Peacock Pheasant displaying its magnificent plumage. Green-legged Partridges made brief appearances, while a Jungle Fowl remained elusive in the background. White-rumped Shamans, Dark-necked Tailorbirds, and Stripe-cheeked Bulbuls were seen regularly, and a Greater Coucal provided excellent views. In the distance, a Lesser Mousedeer was spotted by a few lucky observers. After this memorable experience, we strolled back towards the lodge, taking a short trail to observe some White-crested Laughingthrushes. A quick coffee break was followed by a walk to another trail, where we were treated to sightings of Southern Yellow-cheeked Crested (Buff-cheeked Gibbons).

In the afternoon, we drove to a forested area, intending to search for Bar-bellied Pitta. However, just as we were about to start our search, the heavens opened, and torrential rain accompanied by thunder and lightning forced us to seek shelter under a bus stop. We patiently waited for the covered shuttle to pick us up and return us to the lodge.

Day 6 Cat Tien - Dilinh - 01st April

This morning, we started with a quick coffee before setting off on foot along the road towards some expansive bamboo areas. Bronzed Drongos perched on the telephone wires, soon joined by the larger Racket-tailed Drongo. A Rufescent Prinia offered excellent views as it sat out in the open, followed by a Chinese White-faced Drongo striking a pose on a wire. We then spotted a Grey-capped Pygmy Woodpecker, though it proved challenging to see high up in the treetops. Fortunately, a Laced Woodpecker flew over and landed within view, allowing everyone to get a proper look. A Hoopoe also flew by before we were treated to sightings of a showy pair of Black-and-red Broadbills.

Next, a blue-winged Leafbird caught our attention, along with a very confiding pair of Buff-breasted Babblers. Thick-billed Green Pigeons made an appearance, followed by great scope views of an Asian Barred Owlet calling from a distant tree. Continuing along the road, we enjoyed good looks at Red-breasted Parakeets, shortly followed by an Indochinese Roller. Low down in the closest bushes, we spotted a Little Spiderhunter and a Scaly-breasted Munia. As we slowly progressed, we encountered a Pin-striped Tit-Babbler, Asian Fairy Bluebirds, Scarlet Minivets, Green-billed Malkohas, Racket-tailed Treepies, a Blue-bearded Bee-eater, and then a fantastic display from Heart-spotted Woodpeckers. After returning for breakfast, we packed our bags and headed to the river ferry, where we met up with our coach and set off for our next destination. We arrived at our lovely hotel in the early afternoon and, after settling in, reconvened in the afternoon to admire the view from the veranda of the restaurant area overlooking the coffee plantations. There, we spotted lots of Ashy Drongos, the occasional Black Drongo, Black-necked Starlings, a Burmese Shrike, and then had great looks at a Chestnut-winged Cuckoo. We also observed a Lineated Barbet, White-throated Kingfisher, and out in the distant rice fields, we saw a Pintail Snipe, Watercock, Greater Coucals, and Chinese Pond Herons. Later, we drove to some hillsides, making a couple of stops where we were fortunate enough to see Barred Cuckoo-Doves. Slowly walking the road, we spotted Flavescent Bulbuls, a Grey-capped Emerald Dove, Grey-throated Tits, Maroon Orioles, and in a small mixed flock, we found Yellow-browed Warblers, Scarlet Minivets, Black-winged Cuckoo-shrikes, a elusive Mugimaki Flycatcher, and heard the calls of Long-tailed Broadbills.

Day 7 Dìlinh - Dalat - 02nd April

This morning, we enjoyed an early breakfast and spotted a few birds in the garden, including a Mugimaki Flycatcher and an Asian Brown Flycatcher. Setting off for a morning of birding, we passed by a Hair-crested Drongo perched on a gate before reaching the ridge where we began our walk alongside the forest road. The misty weather posed a challenge, frustrating all of us initially. Despite the conditions, we managed to find an Indochinese (Annam) Barbet and eventually spotted an Streaked Wren-Babbler after a bit of effort. We also encountered Streaked Spiderhunters and Grey-eyed Bulbuls before venturing onto a forest trail in pursuit of the elusive Indochinese Green Magpies. Despite their calls, they proved incredibly difficult to observe clearly. While attempting to catch glimpses of them, we also briefly spotted both Long-tailed and Silver-breasted Broadbills, as well as some very active Red-billed Scimitar-babblers. Returning to the trail, we rejoined our bus and drove back down the road until the mist cleared. Here, we embarked on a downhill walk and soon encountered a mixed flock of birds. Among them, we sighted a Lesser Racket-tailed Drongo, followed by Indochinese Barbets, a brief sighting of a Mountain Fulvetta, several Grey-crowned Tits, and a frustratingly elusive Black-headed Parrotbill. After a fabulous lunch, we packed our bags in preparation to move on. While in the paddy fields, we spotted a Slaty-breasted Rail. Our next destination was a birding spot near Dalat. At the edge of the pine forest, we observed Grey Bushchats, a couple of Bar-winged Flycatcher-Shrikes, a Hill Prinia, and White-cheeked Laughingthrushes. We also witnessed Streaked Spiderhunters feeding on purple flowers. A walk along a trail provided further views of Hill Prinias, and we were delighted to encounter a group of five Vietnamese Cutias. Finally, we spotted a White-faced Jay before retreating as rain appeared imminent.

Day 8 Dalat - Mount Langbian - 03rd April

This morning, we enjoyed an early breakfast before embarking on our journey to Mount Langbian. At our first stop, where we were dropped off, Minh soon heard one of our target species, the Collared Laughingthrush. Patiently waiting, we were eventually rewarded with good views of five of these special birds. While a Lesser Shortwing was only spotted by a few of us, we all managed to catch sight of a Large Niltava and a group of Mountain Fulvettas. Several White-cheeked Laughingthrushes were also spotted, along with a Little Pied Flycatcher and brief glimpses of a White-browed Scimitar Babbler. Continuing along the track, we found Kloss's Warblers, and with some patience, everyone was able to see a Grey-bellied Tesia and a pair of Grey-throated Babblers. A Collared Owlet started calling, and we successfully tracked it down for excellent views. Moving slowly onward, we encountered small flocks of Grey-capped Tits, along with Green-backed (Langbian) Tits, a Verditer Flycatcher, and Chestnut-vented Nuthatches. A Mountain Bulbul was spotted next, followed shortly by some fabulous Dalat Shrike-Babblers. Nearby, we observed Little Pied Flycatchers, more Kloss's Warblers, and then were treated to the sight of a Black Eagle flying low within the forest. Our next sighting was a pair of White-speckled Sibias, along with amazing views of four Hume's Treecreepers.

We also spotted 2-barred Warblers and Blyth's Warblers flitting around the treetops, as well as a group of Brown-backed Bulbuls. In one tree, we found Pygmy Woodpeckers and several Chestnut-vented Nuthatches. As we made our way down, we noticed an early Mugimaki Flycatcher. We returned to the hotel for a rest before setting off again at 4:00 PM. During a roadside stop, we only managed to spot a Blue-winged Minla. At dusk, we were delighted to encounter a Large-tailed Nightjar, and we heard the calls of a Mountain Scops Owl and a couple of Hodgson's Frogmouths, though we didn't manage to see them.

Day 9 Dalat - Valley - 04th April

After an early breakfast, we made our way to the Ta Nung Valley. One of the first birds we encountered was a Square-tailed Drongo Cuckoo, which called incessantly from the pine trees above us. Perched on a dead tree, we scoped Streaked Spiderhunters and some Scaly-breasted Munias. Moving to a flowering hillside, we were treated to fantastic views of Black-throated (Langbian) Sunbirds. As we explored the park, we spotted Grey-capped Tits, Kloss's Warblers, and two Vietnamese Greenfinches perched on a pine tree. A pair of White-throated Fantails showed themselves well, alongside Mountain Bulbuls and an Indochinese

Barbet. Although we struggled to see the Grey-crowned Crocias, which called from the tallest treetops, we did manage to spot a smart looking Large Niltava. Later, on a flowering bottlebrush tree, Mrs Gould's (Annam) Sunbirds made a splendid appearance. We also observed various butterflies and dragonflies. Returning to the hotel for a rest, we headed out again in the afternoon to explore Lake Road. A small stream attracted numerous birds, including Blue-winged Minlas, Kloss's Warblers, a White-faced Jay, and a Grey Nightjar perched on a branch of a pine tree, spotted by Gina. We then had a hard task seeing a delightful Rufous-browed Flycatcher, what a superb yet skulking bird. As dusk fell, we enjoyed excellent views of Grey Nightjars, while a Long-tailed Nightjar's call echoed through the evening air. Following the call of an Oriental Scops Owl, we were rewarded with great sightings. Although a Hodgson's Frogmouth called nearby, it remained elusive.

Day 10 Dalat - Valley - 05th April

After an early breakfast, we set off to an area along the roadside. Here, we quickly spotted a Rufous-capped Babbler, and after some frantic moments, we finally set eyes on the elusive Grey-crowned Crocias. Nearby, we observed a smart looking Rufous-backed Sibia. As we rounded a corner, we enjoyed excellent views of a Clicking Shrike-Babbler, accompanied by several Oriental White-eyes and a Grey-capped Canary Flycatcher. Moving on to our next stop, we walked a track into the forest. Along the way, we encountered an adult Chestnut-vented Nuthatch tending to a nest hole. We also spotted a few Kloss's and Blyth's Leaf Warblers,

Scarlet Minivets, and in the denser forest, a couple of Dalat Shrike-Babblers. A pair of Black-headed Parrotbills made an appearance, and although we heard a Blue Pitta, it remained elusive. However, a mixed flock contained four or more Grey-headed Canary Flycatchers and a very nice Yellow-billed Nuthatch. In another patch of forest, while attempting to locate the pitta again, we were rewarded with a group of Black-hooded Laughingthrushes moving through. On our way out, we caught sight of a male Long-tailed (Annam) Minivet. Our next destination was a high elevation pine forest, where we found a Burmese Shrike and a very smart Slender-billed Oriole. Grey-chinned Minivets were also present, along with a confiding pair of Grey-capped Pygmy Woodpeckers. After enjoying our picnic lunch, we headed to our last stop of the day, where we walked a track up to a hilltop. We scoped a Yellow-vented Green Pigeon, and further up, we got good looks at a singing Plaintive Cuckoo and quite a few Vietnamese Greenfinches. A female Red Crossbill flew in, followed shortly by a male. We also got more views of Greenfinches and a nice Verditer Flycatcher. On our way down, we could hear an Indochinese Green Magpie, but despite our best efforts, we only managed to hear this incredibly elusive bird. Back down on the road, we rested on the bus before dusk, where we soon had multiple sightings of Grey Nightjars flying around. Although we heard the Hodgson's Frogmouth close by, we couldn't detect it.

Day 11 Dalat - Ho Chi Minh - 06th April

After breakfast, we packed our luggage onto the bus and set off towards Saigon. Our first stop led us to walk a short distance to an area of grassy dry scrub. A Radde's Warbler made an appearance along with several Grey Bush Chats. Here, we worked hard and were eventually rewarded with super-close looks at a Dalat Bush Warbler. On our way back, we encountered Hill Prinias, Kloss's Warblers, Two-barred Warblers, and Yellow-browed Warblers. We then drove back, enjoying a nice lunch stop with superb views.

Kind regards

Steve & Gina

Species below have alternate names depending on authority used. The above checklist follows the I.O.C.

Red Collared Dove (Streptopelia tranquebarica humilis)
Sometimes referred to as Red Turtle Dove.

Common Emerald Dove (Chalcophaps indica indica)
Also known as Grey-capped Emerald Dove

Blyth's Frogmouth (Batrachostomus affinis continentalis)
Sometimes referred to as Indochinese Frogmouth

Indochinese Barbet (Psilopogon annamensis)
Sometimes called Annam Barbet

White-browed (Dalat) Shrike-babbler (Pteruthius aeralatus annamensis)
Dalat Shrike-babbler was formerly split from Pied [White-browed] Shrike-babbler P. flaviscapis (Rheindt & Eaton 2009). A recent reassessment of the vocalizations by Boesman et al (2016) further suggests that the original split of the mainland taxa of White-browed Shrike-babbler may have been premature. Lump with Pteruthius aeralatus following del Hoyo & Collar (2016) and HBW/BirdLife.

Long-tailed Minivet (Pericrocotus ethologus annamensis)
Locally referred to as Annam Minivet

Ashy Drongo (Dicrurus leucophaeus)
I simply cannot work out this complex of subspecies
Dicrurus leucophaeus innexus - does not appear to be present in Vietnam.
The follow are present in Veitnam:
Dicrurus leucophaeus bondi
Dicrurus leucophaeus mouhoti
Dicrurus leucophaeus hopwoodi
Dicrurus leucophaeus salangensis
Dicrurus leucophaeus leucogenis

Eastern Jungle Crow (Corvus levaillantii)
Considered by some as a subspecies of Large-billed Crow

Green-backed Tit (Parus monticolus legendrei)
This subspecies sometimes called Langbian Tit

Ashy Bulbul (Hemixos flavala remotus)
This subspecies also called Brown-backed Bulbul

Streaked Wren-babbler (Gypsophila brevicaudata rufiventer)
This subspecies also known locally as Annam Streaked Wren-babbler

Blue-winged Minla (Actinodura cyanouroptera orientalis)
This subspecies known as Plain Minla

Hume's Treecreeper (Certhia manipurensis)
Also called Manipur or Burmese Treecreeper

Lesser Shortwing (Brachypteryx leucophris langbianensis)
This subspecies can be called Langbian Lesser Shortwing

Thick-billed Flowerpecker (Dicaeum agile obsolete)
This subspecies may be called Modest Flowerpecker

Black-throated Sunbird (Aethopyga saturata johnsi)
This subspecies can be called Langbian Sunbird

Mrs. Gould's Sunbird (Aethopyga gouldiae annamensis)
Subspecies also called Annam Sunbird

Red Crossbill (Loxia curvirostra meridionalis)
This subspecies is very isolated from all other Red Crossbills and sometimes referred to as Dalat Red Crossbill

Southern Yellow-cheeked Crested Gibbon (Nomascus gabriellae)
Also called Buff-cheeked Gibbon

Black-shanked Douc (Pygathrix nigripes)
Also called Black-shanked Douc Langur

Southern Yellow-cheeked
Crested Gibbon

Golden Gem (Libellago lineata)

White Dragontail (Lamproptera curius)

Lesser Short-nosed Fruit Bat

Atlas Moth (Attacus atlas)
